Our clients and the work we do

We regularly act for companies in the technology sector, as well as those investing in them, and as a result we have a thorough understanding of the needs of technology related companies across the board. Our team is able to meet your needs in all areas ranging from corporate deals (such as investments, sales and acquisitions) to customer-related and development contracts, employment related advice and intellectual property protection the next steps in the corporate life cycle, with the aim of ensuring that you have the right structures in place to pass through the next round of due diligence.

Where we advise larger corporations, our lawyers are used to working with everybody from the development team and sales force to members of the board, to ensure that projects run as smoothly as possible.

We aim to add value to projects by identifying the critical business issues early on and tailoring our approach and related advice to those issues.

In corporate transactions, our IT team also adopts a tailored approach. For companies coming to the UK from overseas, we will start by advising on the most appropriate corporate structure. When it comes to corporate transactions we ensure that the due diligence exercise focuses on the relevant core issues.

In all the work that we do we bring our knowledge of the IT industry and IT transactions to the fore.
